Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ingold et al.(6,831,110).

Ingold et al. discloses preparations rigid polyurethane foams prepared from (1.) isocyanate materials (2.) polyols, including polyols prepared from toluene diamine and other polyols having hydroxyl functionalities and OH numbers as claimed, (3.) blowing agents including water in amounts as claimed and other blowing agents, as desired, which include the hydrofluorocarbons as defined by applicants' claims, and (4.) catalyst, surfactants, and other additives (see abstract, column 4 line 23 – column 15 line 28).

Ingold et al. differs from applicants claims in that it does not particularly require the oxyethylene contents for their toluene diamine initiated polyols as defined by applicants' claims. However, Ingold et al.'s own teaching (column 5 lines 33-63) recognizes ethylene oxide as one of the preferred alkoxyating agent in the making of its toluene diamine initiated polyols. Accordingly, it is held that it would have been obvious to have varied the content of ethylene oxide employed in the making of the toluene diamine initiated polyols of Ingold et al. from within Ingold et al. own teaching for the purpose of varying degrees of rigidity/flexibility in products obtained in order to arrive at the products and processes of applicants' claims with the expectation of success in the absence of a showing of new or unexpected results.

Additionally, as to variations of amounts of the respective components used in the making of the preparations of the instant concern, it has long been held that where the general conditions of the claims are disclosed in the prior art, discovering the optimal or workable ranges involves only routine skill in the art. In re Aller, 105 USPQ 233; In re Reese 129 USPQ 402 . Further, a prima facie case of obviousness has been held to exist where the proportions of a reference are close enough to those of the claims to lead to an expectation of the same properties. Titanium Metals v Banner 227 USPQ 773. (see also MPEP 2144.05 I) Similarly, it has been held that discovering the optimum value of a result effective variable involves only routine skill in the art. In re Boesch, 617 F.2d 272,205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980).

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Cho et al. and Schilling et al. are cited for their disclosures of relevant preparations involving toluene diamine initiated polyols in the art.
